Prepare for Spring

REPAIR OR REPLACE IT?

The age old question, do I repair the product that I already know how to use, or do I replace it with a new product that I have to learn to use? Let's look at your current equipment.

1. What is the age of your equipment?
2. Is the product out of warranty?
3. Have you taken it apart & cannot put it back together or having difficulty finding parts?
4. Has your equipment been maintained properly?
5. What is the estimated cost of repairs you have invested into your equipment over the years?

A survey conducted by the Consumer Reports National Research Center states that you should replace the equipment if all of the following are true.

1. Your equipment is more than 8 years old.
2. Repairs are common every season & your equipment is out of warranty.
3. Your existing equipment is no longer environmentally safe or sound.

As technology improves in the lawn equipment arena, there are other factors to take into consideration that may make replacing your unit a must for you.

1. Capability of the old unit to handle the new gas/fuel.
2. Safety features that are now standard.
3. Air & sound pollution levels.
4. Longer warranties.

The bottom line is how much time & money are you spending to keep an older unit running compared to the new units on the market. Also, look at the many financing options that are still very much available & see if that makes more sense for you &/or your business. A payment towards a new unit may be less than the continual repair of an older unit!
